Aud how many such sufferers and often times unsuspected, we conclude there are. One of our townsmen was telling us a few days ago of his unstrung nervous condition, that he is constantly struggling against, and trying to hide from those about him, many of whom could perhaps have no sort of real sympathy for him. While we wish the could, and would give up tobacco, that he has used from boyhood—(a thing he doubtless reckons an impossibility now,)-we would have no one withhold sincere pity for him and all others in like circumstances.

We not very long ago made an item of an ailment of one of our townsmen. The other day he said to us, "Was there an extra edition issued of that number of the Watchman?" Darling of Vershire, high bailiff; Mrs. Fred L. Laird of Montpelier, reporter. On call of the jury calendar but four of the eleven cases set appeared likely to be tried and none was ready the first day. Of the thirty-four petit jurors summoned but twenty-five responded to their names, seven having been excused, among them Arthur J. Hanson of Tunbridge, who was a member of the Legislature and excused for the week only. On Thursday was tried the case of William Boyce vs. Edward Weters, an action for assault and battery alleged to have been committed on the plaintiff at East Braintree Oct. 17, 1908, the defence being the plea of self detence. Judge Haselton charged the jury on Friday morning and after considering the matter all day they reported disagreement and were discharged. The next case for trial, George Lane vs. Central Vermont Railway Co., was set for Monday afternoon at two o'clock. But two other cases stand for trial. Of the nine court cases none are to be heard, most of them being continued. Twelve new divorce cases have been entered all from the center and west side of the of the county.
